A Glimpse at the National Banking System of Japan.

Although Japan is a constitutional monarch, the monarch's title is equivalent to the word emperor, banking goes on there with all the system, success and satisfaction that all public and official affairs in Japan defend a man charged with mayhem universally present. Reverence and respect for the chief magistrate, and all constituted authority, with inborn patriotism, helps much in the direction of success for all their organized efforts. The Japanese, apart from these aids to successful "association" and mutual cooperation for the good of their beloved country, are truly a wise, modest, industrious, thrifty and wonderful people.

In the Nick of Time.

The head of the great house of Crocker & Company, importers and dealers in all kinds of fine china, stood at the door of his establishment, gazing abstractedly across the street. Suddenly his eyes were transfixed by an object in the distance that was moving methodically toward his doorway. Pausing for a brief instant to make sure that he was not mistaken, he rushed frantically to the rear of the store and called excitedly to the several clerks who were busy there:

"Quick! Help me bar up the entrance. There is no time to be lost. Even now all our valuable stock is in imminent peril.'

Hastening to the front of the store, in a few seconds they were all engaged in fastening down the iron shutters, locking the doors, and making all secure against the visitation of the strange figure that was even now upon the threshold.

THE ELECTRIC PROBE.

Locating Bullets Made Easy by Recent. Invention.

How Science and Inventive Genius Have Lightened the Responsibilities of Sur-geons—The Simple Little In-strument Described.

What has been designated as "the greatest advance that has been made in military surgery in a hundred years" is the electric bullet-finder, an invention of Dr. John H. Girdner, of New York.

Heretofore se'el made use of the Nelaton prope in the effort to locate a bullet that had entered the human bodo, and while the electric probe will supersede the old one yet surgical art regards that device as an invention that revolutionized former methods of healing gun-shot

The Nelaton probe was named after the great French surgeon who invented it. He was called in to treat Garibaldi, who had a bullet in his body. Nelaton was unable to locate it and the Italian patriot's life was despaired of. Nelaton sat up one whole night thinking. It finally occurred to him to use an ordinary probe with a smooth round piece porcelain on the end. By inserting it in the wound he hoped to get the lead markings on the white piece of porcelain, showing where the bullet lay. To think was to act, and on the next day the experiment was tried. Sure enough, when the probe was inserted and removed lead markings were found on the bulb of the probe. The bullet was located and Garibaldi was saved.

The new probe is an electrical affair. It consists of an ordinary telephone receiver, an ordinary metal probe and an extra bulb of the same metal that the probe is made of. Inasmuch as there is no battery connected with the apparatus, it may puzzle even an electrician to discover wherein the electrical eletific aspect, for its invention proves that there is a definite quantity of electricity in the body which may be utilized for practical purposes. In short, the human body is the battery which supplies the current.

The discovery by Dr. John H. Girdner, of New York, was almost as dramatic as that of the Nelaton probe. Dr. Girdner had tried for years to devise some surer means of locating bullets than was possible with the ordinary probe. Some years ago somebody had invented an electric bullet which depended on a battery cell to supply the current. the trouble was that as soon as the end of the probe was inserted in the flesh an electric circuit would be established through the flesh itself and the electric bell would ring. So it was not known whether a bullet had been touched or not. One night it occurred to Dr. Girdner that the body itself might contain enough of a current to operate a bell or a telephone receiver. Experiment proved the fact.

The principle of the instrument is as follows: The metal bulb is placed in the wounded person's mouth, the telephone receiver is held to the surgeon's ear and the probe in the hole made by the bullet. The bulb in the mouth and the probe are made of the same metal, copper being preferred; and because they are the same no manifestation is heard in the telephone. But as soon as the leaden bullet is touched it brings another metal into the circuit. The human body then immediately becomes one immense cell, which generates a current strong enough to operate the telephone, so that as soon as the bullet is touched a click is heard in the telephone and the location of the bullet is established beyond a doubt. The invention of this instrument has created quite a furor among surgeons. It has been adopted as a standard in the United States army and navy and recently it was adopted by the German army.-Chicago

Plantation colored people are often afflicted, as Dr. when traveling Their diseases

Many of them had what they called "a rising under the jaw." This was a swelling of the paratoid or submaxilary gland. He used with them, invariably, his Golden Relief. As it relieved the pain and reduced the swelling almost immediately in every case, they called it "Golden Relief Quick," a ret inappropriate name. Dr. Fenner met a planter who informed him that he would sooner be without corn meal and bacon on which his colored help subsisted, than Golden Relief, which he used to cure their aches, pains, summer complaints and flux. This Remedy cures any allment which has Inflammation and pain as its base, from a chronic bronchitis to a pulmonary consumption. Inflammation can no more exist in presence of this remedy than can the honey bee under the funacs of sulphur. No inflammation, no swelling, no pain, no bronchitis, no consumption. One tablespoonful dose is a certain cure for La Grippe. No narcotics or mineral poisons in it. Safe and certain—never disappoints. Money refunded if satisfaction not given. Take a bottle home to-day.

Big, buzzy bugs that fly into the summer resorter's eyes and ears are her especial horror, and the sight of one is likely to make her execute a sudden but exceedingly original Indian schottish. In the bowling alley she is very unhappy for fear that the balls will jump up and hit

BROWN'S COURTSHIP.

Richard Brown had lived a bache or for forty years and declared his intention of continuing in the state of single-blessedness for the remainder of his life-greatly to the satisfaction of his relatives, the Hinkles, with whom he resided, for be it known Uncle Richard was worth a cool half million, and the Hinkles were his only living relations.

Hopeful as poor human nature is of longevity, Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle scarcely expected to survive their cousin, who was their junior by ten years, but Adelaide, and Rose, and Charles, and Washington might in all probability be his heirs, and to this end the parents labored. Uncle Richard had the best room in the house, the best chair, the most particular consideration. His wishes were deferred to and his advice taken on every occasion. Matters progressed smoothly until it was habit, and not hypocrisy, which made Cousin Richard actually master of the house.

However, a day came at last which set the whole household in commotion. Miss Amanda Dove had been invited to spend a week with the Hinkles, and Miss Dove, being a stranger, was to wait at the depot until some one came for her in a carriage. The Hinkles resided some miles out of town, and had not occupied their residence for many months, so that people were not always properly directed by the neighbors. It was decided that Mr. Hinkle should escort Miss Dove; but before the day of her arrival dawned business had called that gentleman to Boston. Moreover, Mrs. Hinkle instrument assumes its truly scien-, were at boarding-school. No one was to be found todrive, and neither Rose nor Adelaide could handle the

"Not at all-sit down," said Bachelor Brown.

"You can see how ill I am," said Mrs. Hinkle. "I can hardly hold up my head, much less drive, and Mr. Hinkle is away, and the boys, too, and no one can handle the reins, and there is poor Miss Dove at the depot by this time." "Maria." said the old bachelor.

'young ladies, my little cousins excepted, are my abomination. I never had anything to do with 'em and I never will. No doubt she's capable of seeing herself here." Mrs. Hinkle retreated. 'One ought to make some sacrifice for a friend," said Adelaide.

"I'll tell him she's a child. He's always good to children." "It will never do," said Mrs. Hinkle. "He'll never forgive you." But Adelaide ran up to her cousin's study and burst in with an exceedingly theatrical laugh. "What a mistake!" she said, "and how stupid of them all. You think Amanda is a young lady, don't you?" "Isn't she?" asked the bachelor. "As if a child of nine years could bel" said Adelaide. Poor little

"Poor little thing, indeed," said the old bachelor, hurrying on his coat and hat. "Bless me, why didn't you mention it?" Meanwhile Bachelor Brown drove to the depot. It was a long drive over a bad road, but he kept on his way very cheerfully. He was ex-tremely fond of children. He had, even in his haste, put a paper of candy in his pocket. When, on reaching the depot, he saw no sign of a child he grew alarmed. He ran his fingers through his hair and peeped into the ladies' waiting room. Only a full-grown young lady sat there, and he retreated. The colored woman who waited in the apartment came out of her nook as she saw him, and he addressed her:

"Have you seen a little girl waiting for some one?" "No, sir," said the woman "There was two-came down, but they've been took." "Oh, dear!" said Bachelor Brown.

'I hope there's no mistake. It's a little Miss Dove. Please make inquiries." As he uttered these words the full-grown young lady in the waiting-room was seen to blush violently and to arise. "I'm Miss Dove," she said, "and I expected some one from Mr. Hin-kle's."

"I—I beg your pardon," he began.
"I expected to find a little girl—

Mr. Montgomery left several blanks in his speech Monday to be but merits the people's fullest confifilled with applause-those blanks dence and esteem. From Judge of sert that the great luminary are there yet.

It was painful to see Mr. Montgomery in his speech Monday appealing to his auditors with such a beseeching look for a little sound of applause that never came.

THERE was not a man in the Court House Monday who in his heart did John W. Lewis is afraid to meet Mr. Montgomery in joint debate.

"Our Alex" knows how to defeat the choice of his constituents for Speaker of the House and to get himself appointed upon an important Committee immediately after, but he doesn't know how to make even a plansible speech.

IMMEDIATELY after the passage of the Gorman bill, by which a duty of 40 per cent was placed on sugar that article rose in price about one cent per pound. But as the Democratic leaders saw the loss of thousands of votes as the result, they forthwith appealed to the Sugar Trust to which they had made the magnificent present of $40,000,000 by taxing sugar and begged that the price might be kept down until after the election. Seeing in the Democratic party its triend and benefactor the trust granted the request and the price of sugar shows a tendency to decline. See?

THE Ohio Democrats declared themselves in favor of "the unlimited comage of silver" in their recent State Convention, but Grover says Free Silver would ruin the country. Two-thirds of the Democratic State Conventions, a few years ago, declared for Free Silver, and even Mr. Montgomery carpeted his District way and to stoop to ridicule and with his Free Silver speeches and yet misrepresent that which we could the great Democratic Stuffed Prophet | not answer as is the habitual practice is always ready to knock out the sil- of a sheet whose prejudice holds it verites. Verily the Democratic par- in "the gall of bitterness and in ty is an organization made up of the bonds of iniquity." There is no misodds and ends of political opinions represention in the assertion that Mr. and held together by the ever ready | Montgomery's effort at the Court and irresistable thirst for office.

THE Republicans of far away Washington State are a level headed set always and they have never more fully demonstrated their possession of gray matter than in their State platform adopted at the Spokane Convention on September 20. Here is one plank that is worthy of the perusal of every voter:

"We deplore the terrible calamity that has befallen our common country by reason of the gross incompetency and misrule of the Democratic party, which for nearly two years has had absolute control of the federal government. We denounce the foreign policy of the present admin-istration for bringing our diplomatic service into disgrace abroad and contempt at home; for its studied and persistent effort to humiliate and annoy; to injure and continually manifest its contempt for those whose injuries received while defending the flag of their country, merited for them not only the everlasting gratitude, but also the bounty of the na-We condemn it for its so-called policy of tariff reform, which in practice its leader and head denounces as one of 'perfidy and dishonor,' a policy which taxed the poor man's breakfast table for the sake of enriching its political friend and benefactor, the coloseal Sugar Trust of America; a policy the very menace of which has destroyed confidence, ruined values, heard of it before? Did not the Dems the face of all this does any Democrat have the effrontery to insult common intelligence by asserting that his party is in favor of free sugar? Ye gods it seems some folks can't shake off the spirit of Ananias nobow.

Or course the South is solid and o long as the corrupt methods used by the Democratic party to control elections are submitted to by the people, just so long will it remain solid. Investigations of the Alabama election sometime ago, in which Oates, Democratic candidate defeated Kobb, the Populist candidate for Governor, shows the very height of shameless fraud and ballot box stuffing. In Whitehall beat, Lowndes county, where only 17 votes were actually cast a return of 301 majority was made for Oates and in Dallas county where there were only 1,583 votes cast, 6,663 were counted, showing 5,081 stuffed. The very heavens should cry out lines: against such corruption.

THE date for the election is drawing near when the people will be called upon to choose from among the contestants for place, those whom they would have as servants. It is no mean privilege to have this right of choice, and the right itself is fraught with no small responsibility. The Republican party has entered that contest and will continue in it to the close, proud of the men who constitute its ticket, and doubly assured that there is not one man of them Peaceand from Constable to Congressman, there is not on the Republican ticket one man who would not in the office to which he aspires reflect cred it upon his own genuine manhood and integrity and honor upon the constituency that should elect him. It has e ver been the pride of the Repubnot give the lie to the assertion that lican party to place none but good and able men before the people for their suffrage and this year of 1894 is no exception to that well established rule. The completion of orders for replenishment of stocks leaves a narrower demand and it is yet too early for consumption to provide futher orders.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28. - Bradstreet's review of trade to-morrow will say: Trade reports from leading centers in the Dominion of Canada tell of trade improvement. Jobbers at Toronto report business equal to expectations, particularly in dry goods and hardware.

The reader will bear in mind that the trade depression continues in this country but trade improvement is found in Canada. It is always so. When we approach Free Trade in the United States depression follows with us, but prosperity with our foreign neighbors.

It has never been the policy of THE REPUBLICAN to misrepresent a political opponent nor to belittle the worthy effort of an orator of different political views who might visit the town or county. It has chosen rather to give a tair and unbiased account alike of friend and foe. Neither is it now the intention of THE REPUBLICAN to depart from this the only honorable House Monday was a flat failure. His own party leaders in the county were aware of it. Not one-third of them even remained to hear his speech. A considerable crowd had gathered at County Court and to hear the county candidates and Mr. Montgomery began with a fair audience, which at once began to diminish. By the time he had finished there were less than one hundred men in the Court House.

FAIR WEEK

Passed off Quietly with Nothing to Mar the Happiness of Anyone.

Save a few Accidents which will not Prove Fatal.

Last week was the annual meeting of the Ohio County Fair. Good crowds were in attendance each day and on Saturday the Amphitheater was filled to overflowing. Good racing and fine horses were in abundance.

Master David Weaver came in close proximity with the tongue of Casebier & Burton's 'bus, but was not seriously hurt. He was soon able to be running about town.

A race horse flew the track Saturday and capsized Mr. Mat Neel, who chanced to be in the way, and further on the same horse ran against Mr. Oscar Liles, bruising him up considerably, and finally rounded up by coming under the wire last.

The dust being so thick between the bridge and the Fair Ground, one could not see to drive, Dr. J. E. Pendleton's buggy collided with Perry Casebier's 'bus, and threw the Doctor out, fracturing a couple of his ribs and tearing a wheel off the burgy. SUPERSTITION.

A Short Chapter on a Wide-Spread Evil.

Number Thirteen and Friday as Unlucky -- Why Children in Their Early Childhood Should Be Kept from Su-speech.

There is far more superstition in the world, even among intelligent people, than one would imagine. Its origin is traceable to the early days of the human race, when men's minds were of childlike simplicity, and not trained to look at the beginning of things or to reason from effect to cause. The "thirteen" superstition, for instance, comes down to us from long-past ages, when the number was regarded as a superfluity, being next to twelve, which was regarded as a perfect number compounded of three and four. The superstitious idea of "bad luck" that is connected with Friday resulted from its immediately preceding the original or Jewish Sabbath, which made it necessary to leave uncompleted any work begun on Friday. Many consider this day an inauspicious one because it is associated with the crucifixion and with the hanging of criminals.

Many philosophers consider superstition the basis of religion, which, to a certain degree, is a reaching out toward and a dependence upon the supernatural. Huxley traced the almost universal belief in ghosts Alexander Shott and John S. Nott. a few intimate friends and relatives and hopgoblins back to the infancy of human thought, and it is in Mr. Moore is one of the county's best | the young, developing minds of today that the belief in ghosts and other supernatural fancies is most powerful. The cause of this is unintelligent teaching and the tendency to drive instead of to guide. Children begin to reason about these things not far from the age of four, and up to their twelfth year the young minds are very impressionable. After this they become scepticle and are not so easily persuaded. It is a bad practice for mothers or murses to tell children that which they know to be untrue, as, for instance, that angels guard the beds of babes or that some spook is prepared and eager to carry off children who are not well behaved. It is a custom that cannot be too se verely condemned, for its results cling to one even in adult years, and are doubtless the result of much unhappiness. The mind of the girl is more easily impressed than that of the boy. She accepts these things as truths, carries them through her after life, and thus taints the minds of the young which she, in turn, must direct and influence. So it goes on from generation to generation, with the result that superstition clouds the intellects and judgments of people whose reason should teach them better, and the race is unable to throw off the shackles that bound their fathers and thus progress more steadily toward the

It is one of the inconsistencies of our broadening civilization that children are not taught the truth in regard to natural phenomena. If absolute statement of fact cannot be effective, at least some good may result from leading the young mind away from false ideas. There may be some doubt as to the wisdom of enlightening children on the Santa Claus myth, the Red Riding Hood fable and similar fairy-like subjects, benefit as well as establish a sense of comfort and safety to assure them that ghosts and spooks and goblins do not exist; that the only disembodied voice they need to fear is the voice of conscience; that right and wrong bring their own reward and punishment; and that truth in all things should be the incentive of every thought and action.-Boston

I don't suppose the people of Grayson county ever witnessed such an outpouring at a public speaking in their midst. my experience with Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. F. L. BATTLE The crowd could not have been less than 2,000. Mr. Lewis spoke for two hours and twenty five minutes, the longest speech he has made during the campaign. He was at his best, being inspired by the splendid audience before him. His speech was on Beaver Dam. H. MERRICK, Ag't. | a high plane of dignified discussion; eminently fair and free from anything objectionable. He, however, drove home with great power the responsibility for the present distressed condition of the country, showing up the ruinous legislation of the Democratic party so clear and plain that the ways faring man, though out of balance, could not fail to see where the trouble lies. It was the effort of a master, bis flights of eloquence, at times, were really grand and the duce subject of economics were made so attractive by his splendid oratory that the most perfect attention was given him by that great audience through his whole and courtesies which obtain among gentlemen, that after what has passed between Mr. A B. Montgomery and Mr. Lewis, and the fact that Mr. Lewis has repeatedly refused to debate with Montgomery and insists on his right to manage and make his own canvass in his own way, free from molestation, that Mr. Montgomery should still insist in running in on Mr. Lewis' appointments and interfering with him. It is certainly the spirit of a bulldozer that prompts him. Mr. Montgomery was at Leitchfield o speak that day. This shows facts regarding the Sheperdsville and Hodgensville incidents, all of which have heretofore been published, Mr. Montgomery being present and not dissenting nor denying any part of either. Mr. Lewis said in view of what had passed between them, as he had related, and his positive refusal to recognize Montgomery be would not now attempt to properly characterize the gall and cheek of a manwho under the circumstances would force himself upon aim, but would only close the whole matter with the well known quotation from Cicero, 'de qustibus non est disputandum."

Mr. Lewis made his speech, in other respects, the same as if Montgomery had not been here and when through left the house and so did the crowd. A few revenue officials, the Post-master, and their immediate friends, about 100 in all remained to hear Montgomery, a painful contrast with the magnificent audience which taced Mr. Lewis. I have understood that Montgomery denied in his speech, the Hodgenville incident. The man who would deny that would deny anything. He would not deny it in Lewis' presence, either at Hodgenville or Leitchfield. good breeding and gentlemanly courtesy to the dogs and takes all chances in interfering with the people and preventing them from hearing, undisturbed, Mr. Lewis' manly exposition of the evil times that are upon us. #### HARD TO KILL.

The Tenacity with Which the Alligator Clings to Life.

The Difficulty of Bagging the Reptile with Slow Death-His Flesh Eaten

An alligator's tenacity of life is remarkable. I have no doubt that when its brain is pierced by a bullet the animal does not long survive, but it sinks into deep water, where it cannot be seen. I never succeeded in killing and bagging an alligator by a shot in the brain, says Longman's Magazine. The structure of the skull provides so much protection to the brain, and a bullet might easily be deflected by the hard bones. It was not my vocation to go about killing alligators, but on one cccasion I was witness to the great difficulty of taking the animal's life.

We were on a shooting trip near the Pointee indigo factory on the Ganges, and one day when we returned from our morning's round in the jungles, after deer and always a possible tiger or wolf, we found that some fishermen had brought in an alligator about six feet long, securely bound on a bullock cart. The animal was still alive, but had evidently been severely beaten to make him quiet on the bullock cart, so the order was given to tlea stout rope around its loins and to turn it into a small tank to refresh and recover itself while we were taking our baths and our breakfast. Breakfast over, the allegator was hauled out of the tank, and was quite lively, so that it had to be fastened to a tree. Then operations for killing it began, but bullets from a small rifle or an ordinary twelvebore gun seemed only to irritate it. A Sontal brought a large spear, one of the lato venabula ferro which they use, and drove it down the alligator's throat into its vitals, and this had more effect, while another man got an ax and chopped away at the neck till the head was separated from the body. The body was then cut open and the heart was lying on the ground by its side, but still the tail continued to move. But here we withdrew and the mob of Sontals, who had been eagerly waiting, rushed in with their knives and cut up the body and ate everything eatable, so that in a short time there was nothing left but the skin and bones.

A FACING STEAM YACHT.

It Carries No Luxuries And Takes as

Much Care as a Horse. There is a man in New York who owns a steam yacht on which there is not even an easy chair, though the yacht is upward of sixty feet long and cost nearly as much as a substantial house in Harlem. Whenever the owner goes out on his yacht he and the members of the crew wrap themselves up in rubber coats, pull their caps down over their eyes, crouch down in the stern of the boat and throw the throttle wide open. Then the yacht bounds forward at the rate of twenty miles or more an hour, while the water is thrown up in a solid bank on either side of her, so that the men crouching in the stern see nothing but these banks of water. The whole boat is drenched with spray. They are thoroughly uncomfortable, but they know that the people on the ferry boats and the clam sloops are looking at them with keen envy, and probably this is a source of delight.

These racing yachts are so delicately constructed that they require as much care as thoroughbred horses. Despite the size of this boat, she is housed so that when she has finished her season's racing she is entirely under cover. Her mahogany surface is freshly polished every day. She is a splendid type of racing machine, but she has no drink, food nor comfort of any kind abroad, and illustrates the extreme development of steam yacht racing at this end of the century .- N. Y. Sun.

Japanese College Girls.

A recent statement that a young Japanese girl at Radcliff college (Harvard annex) is the first of her kind who has come to this country for an education has called forth several corrections, which show that Japanese girl students are by no means rarities here. There is one at Bryn Mawr college, another at Wellesley and a third, Miss Fuji Tsukamoto, at Wilson College for Women at Chambersburg, where she is considered one of the brightest

There was still another Japanese girl, Miss Tsune Hirata San, at Western Maryland college, Westminister, Md., where she was graduated in 1890. Returning to Japan, she married and is now working in the missions at Nagoya. Vassar college also claims a Japanese graduate. Japanese boy students are common enough, and the girls also appear to appreciate American educational institutions.-Philadelphia Record.

EIGHTY-SIX YEARS A SAILOR.

A British Tar Who Saw Fighting When Not Ten Years Old. The grand old man of the British navy lately completed his ninety-fourth year, and a very wonderful career has Admiral Sir Lewis Tobias Jones, G. C. B., a son of Sligo, had, according to the Toronto Empire. He was born in 1799, and entered the service when he was just turned eight years of age, that is to say, on New Year's day, 1808. Nor was this one of the formal entries so common at the period. Before he was ten years old he was present during that disastrous undertaking which we call the Welcheren expedition; he was still a midshipman when he took part in the bombardment of Algiers in 1816, and he saw no more fighting till he was comnent of St. Jean d'Acre in 1840. He, however, saw some severe work in off a kiting.

putting down the slave trade, besides assisting at the capture of Lagos, then a slave depot, which was turned into a refuge for slaves under the British flag. In the same ship—the old paddle-wheel Sampson -he commanded the steam squadron at our naval attack on Odessa in 1854; then helped to reduce Soukhoum Kaleh, on the Circassian coast; then brought his ship safely through the great Euxine storm of November, 1854, by cutting away her masts and letting the seas sweep over her as she steamed head to wind, and as a reward for this he was promoted to the charge of the line of battle ship London, in which he assisted at the capture of Kinburn. He was second in command in China, and in the operations that led to the capture of Pekin in 1860. but his only post as an admiral, for he had no great friends to back him up, and was even fifty-one and a half years in the navy before he got his flag, was at Queenstown. He holds the post of visitor and governor of Greenwich hospital.

AFRAID OF BANKS.

The Curious Case of the Man Who Carries His Money with Him.

A man walked into the hotel, and approached the cigar stand. He ran his hand into his pocket and found no change. He searched every pocket with a like result, and the blood mounted to his forehead. 'Wait a minute," he hurriedly exclaimed, as he went toward the wash room. In a minute or so he reappeared and handed a twenty dollar bill to the clerk, Charlie Baker. Receiving his change, the customer departed, and Walter Tuppan, of the Homer Lee Bank Note company, who was standing by, requested Baker to let him look at the bill. Taking it, Tuppan held it up to the light, and returned it, saying:

"I thought so. That fellow carries his money pinned to his clothes somewhere. How do I know? Why, there's a dozen pin holes in that bill. Hundreds of men carry it the same way. I saw an item in a newspaper the other day which shows how the practice is followed. A town bond of the town of Delhi, N. Y., was turned into the town treasurer for redemption. It was punctured so full of pin holes as to be almost unreadable. As soon as it was determined to be genuine, however, the money was paid and an investigation begun. Then the late owner of the bond finally admitted that he carried the bond for a long time pinned to his undershirt, and as he had changed that garment quite frequently the bond had become full of pin holes.

SHE MEANT BUSINESS. The Way in Which a Would-Be Doctor Proposed to Adjust Things. One of the examiners at a recent examination for a medical degree lately recived the following letter having been tried for them. from a lady candidate:

"Sir: Don't you dare refuse me again in physiology when you know I know all about physiology; I very likely know more than you do. I shall write to Mr. -- if you do about it. Very soon doctors will be drawn only from we pure, nobleminded women, and you vile, drunken, filthy men expelled for ever.

Electric Light and the Eye.

While one part of the world is proudly wagging its head over the improvements in electric lighting, another part of the world is discovering that the human eye is not so effective as it used to be. It is time that this question should be thoroughly examined by competent experts. There can be no doubt that the average person injures his eyesight by using naked electric light. Any layman knows enough to tell that. If the light is shaded sufficiently to protect the eyes one half of the current is wasted. It is probable that the children of the present generation will show the effects of the shock given to the eye by electric light. -Illustrated American.

THE BOLTS OF JOVE.

Spots Which They Seem to Delight to Especially Pavor.

It is a well-known fact that the 'bolts of Jove" seem to have a special spite at certain spots, and that the old saying: "Lightning never strikes twice in the same place," is as false, says the St. Louis Republic, as most of the old proverbs are. The writer knows a tree that has been struck by lightning five times since July 3, 1884-a gatepost standing within two rods of that tree having twice been struck since the same date. During the last seven years five horses have been killed by lightning on a single knoll on the French farm, which lies on the road leading from Flint to Flushing, Mich., and nearly every tree on the same farm is said to bear the marks of the "forked fury." An open lot at East Great Plains, Conn., has been "hit by thunder-bolts," as an old resident of that place expresses it, eleven different times since the spring of 1887, and a piece of woods not more than half a mile away has been literally riddled by the electric shots. At West Heath, Mass.; a hill near the village schoolhouse has been struck by lightning so often that the old settlers have tired trying to keep a record of the singular occurrences.

Two miles out from the little village of Gosport, Ia., two houses and a barn have been struck by lightning on a patch of one-fourth of an acre, and several head of stock were killed on the same spot before it was fenced in for residence pur-

A Black Snake and a Fence Ruil.

When Jake Wendell, of Mount Hamilton, being without a gun, saw a big black snake rushing for him with its mouth open, he just seized a fence rail and rammed it down the snake's throat. But, there! Snakes are just that cute. When this one found he couldn't get the rail out mander of the line-of-battle ship any other way he hung over the Princess Charlotte at the bombard- limb of a tree and shook himself unA WOMAN MOONSHINER.

Mollie Miller, the Head of a Once-Desperate Gang.

How She Learned the Trade-Becomes a Leader Among Outlawed Dealers-Her Retirement - Record for Which She Will Have to Answer.

Mollie Miller's operations at one time were carried on very extensively and she was at the head of a gang which was involved in more bloody fights with revenue officers than any other organized in the south. Her first experience was in the mountains of Sevier county, where she assisted her father. Sam Miller. Here Deputy Marshal Mc-Pherson led a raid under a guide who had a grudge against Miller. In an almost inaccessible gorge the officers encountered the moonshiners, says the Cincinnati Enquirer. A bloody fight followed and three of the revenue mon were killed, the others retreating. It was noticed that a young girl was one of the party, and it has always been believed that she killed one of the officers. Another raid was made, in which Miller was killed and his associates captured. About this time the revenue officers received a box containing the remains of the man who had informed upon the gang. There was nothing to indicate from whom it came, and the box must have been carried by wagon and left at the marshal's

The woman was not found and it was soon known that she had fled. In a few months Polk county, which had always furnished considerable illicit whisky, became the headquarters of the moonshiners throughout East Tennessee, and raid followed raid until there was scarcely a cave on the Hiawassee river that had not been the scene of some bloody fight between the moonshiners and the revenue men.

It became known that this woman was a leader, but she was never arrested but once and then the proof was such that she escaped with a light sentence. After the Knoxville Southern railway was built the country became too easy of access, and with the exception of an occasional petty offender the gang was broken up. The woman moonshiner retired to a small farm, where she remained undisturbed, except at two or three times when she was taken to Chattanooga as a witness, when she would collect her fees and start on a walk over the mountains, a distance of sixty miles, to her

It is supposed that the killing of three revenue officers and four or five informers can be charged to her directly, while the gang of which she was a member could be held accountable for several others, but it was never possible to prove these charges and she died without ever

Bismarck's Last Waltz.

Mme. Carette, once the companion of Empress Eugenie, tells in her memoirs this story of Prince Bis-

"It was at a great ball in the Tuileries in 1867, during the International exhibition. Count Bismarck stood in a corner watching the dancers. In the cotillon the thought came to me that I might offer him a bouquet of roses, and thus compel him to dance with me. Herr von Bismarck was at that time the subject of universal interest. He accepted my bouquet and, without hesitation responding to the invitation that went with it, he danced a waltz with me in a manner quite beyond criticism. This incident, which seemed to harmonize so little with Count Bismarck's seriousness and the important part which he was already playing in state affairs, amused immensely the kings and princes who were present. As he escorted me to my seat after the waltz he took a rosebud from the buttonhole of his coat and gave it to me with the remark: " 'Madam, please keep this bud as a memento of the last waltz that I shall ever dance. I shall never for-

HIS HANDY UNCLE. The Pawn Broker Readily Proves a Friend in Need.

A young man employed at the court house found himself in an embarrassing position the other night. He had an engagement to take a couple of young ladies to one of the suburban resorts, and in donning his best suit forgot his pocketbook, which peacefully reposed in his every-day clothes. When he boarded a street car and the conductor demanded fare he became painfully aware of his unpleasant situation. He managed to find a dime and street car ticket in his clothes and this afforded temporary relief. But the young ladies were new acquaintances and he could not well explain the situation and secure a temporary loan. Besides, young ladies hardly ever carry pocketbooks for such emergencies. And he in vain looked around for a friend who would accommodate him. When the post office was reached a novelidea struck him. "We'll take another car here," he said. "I promised to mail two important letters for my sister, and she'll never forgive me if I neglect the matter." So they got off the car and the young man dashed into the post office and on to the nearest pawn shop. He carried a gold watch and soon had a loan on it, borrowing a cheaper watch to wear until he redeemed his own time-piece. Then he hurried back, and as the young ladies were patiently waiting he did not tell them about any trouble to get stamps. The young ladies thanked him for a very pleasant evening on their return, but they will not know everything until they read this. The watch was, of course, redeemed the next day.-Cincinnati

CO-EDUCATION. Some Reliable Figures Which Indicate

Times-Star.

Its Progress. The great prosperity of the four great colleges for women has led some to think that the separate eduention for girls would be the chosen of the people. An examination of the whole field will throw some light upon this. Some two years ago a computation was made, based on Commissioner Harris' report for 1883-84, which showed that at that date there were in colleges and universities in the United States about 60,000 women students. The list included that glorious army of inspiring lesser colleges not acknowledged by the educationally elect, and it did not include some of the universities where the reports did not distinguish the sex of students. But by the aid of the moderate guesses of some educational experts, and by keeping very much within bounds, an estimate was made which may be considered fairly correct. Of these 60,000 it was found that about 10,000 were in colleges for women alone. Since a very large proportion of this 10,000 is made up from the crowded registers of Vassar, Wellsley, Smith and Bryn Mawr, plausibility seems to be given to the theory mentioned above; but where are the other 50,-000? They are, of course, in the colleges for men and women together, whose name is legion and whose towers are seen behind every hilltop in Ohio, and from afar on the rolling prairie of Iowa, and scatte: 1 over the plains of Nebraska, and beyond the high mountains, even o the utmost sea .- Forum.

FASHIONS IN PICTURES. Fluctuations in the Prices of Famous

Works of Art. While the works of some artists have risen enormously in value since their death, it is evident by the results of the sale of the royal portraits that hung for years in the board room of the old South Sea house in Threadneedle street that those of Allan Ramsay and Sir G. Kneller have, on the contrary, vastly deteriorated in the estimation of art collectors. A life-size portrait of George III. by the former artist, said to be in excellent condition and an admirable picture, realized but twenty four guineas, while that of George II., by Sir G. Kneller, was knocked down for twelve pounds. The result of this sale should at least teach caution to those who believe that there is no better investment of money than in the purchase of pictures by well-known deceased in pictures, as in everything else. It is certain that in years back these pictures could not have been purchased for many times the price they have now fetched, and which it is possible they may, by a turn of the wheel of fashion, again command in the market .- London Standard.

A Lost Dog.

A man came into the office of a Maine paper the other day and thus addressed the young lady at the "How you vas to-day, I hope? I vants for to atvertize my leetle tog on der baper. He vas shet-plack tog mit white spots all ofer him in blaces. His tail vas coot off close up to myselluf und if anypotty fints him, keep him for I pelong to him. Queen Victoria's Crown.

Queen Victoria's crown is composed of hoops of gold, inclosing a cap of deep purple, or rather blue velvet, the hoops being completely covered with precious stones, surmounted with a ball covered with small diamonds and having a Maltese cross of brilliants on the top of The cross has in its cena splendid sapphire. The rim of the crown is clustered with brilliants, ornamented with fleur-de-lis and Maltese crosses equally rich. In front of the Maltese cross, which is in the front of the crown, is the celebrated heartshaped ruby, traditionally said to have been won by the Black Prince at the battle of Cressy and by Henry V. at the battle of Agincourt. Beneath, in the circular rim, is an immense long sapphire. There are many other precious gems-emeralds, rubbles and sapphires-and several small clusters of drop pearls.
